Program

Disdaine me still, that I may ever love
Sweete stay a while, why will you rise?

Robin

Love those beames that breede
Were every thought an eye

The Lady Rich, Her Galliard

Stay time a while thy flying
Goe nightly cares, the enemy to rest
From silent night, true register of moanes

Lasso vita mia mi fa morire
In this trembling shadow
Thou mighty God

Susanna Galliard

Up merry mates, to Neptunes prayse
Welcome blacke night
Cease these false sports

Notas al programa

Musickes Delight invites you to participate in “A Pilgrimes Solace”, named after the song book with instrumental accompaniment by John Dowland, taking you on a journey from the most mundane to total transcendence of the idea of love, and life itself. There is an inner search for the question “What is love?”, especially after the disenchantment of the mundane, which leads the protagonist to search within himself and travel towards the Divine. At the end of this beautiful compilation of little gems this true “pilgrim's consolation” takes us back to earth: the final pieces of the collection are dramatic melodies, some jovial and others melancholic, possibly for use in celebrations of Masques or entertainment at court instead of music making at home.

(...continuation...)

They all have gods and allegorical figures in them, with a story set in short verses - between one and three - followed by a "conclusion" that at the end proposes a moral reflection. It is this search, this perpetual wandering of the traveller that makes this collection unique. Musickes Delight performs it with varied instrumentation, sometimes purely instrumental, sometimes vocal, with virtuosic viola da gamba solos and wonderful lute instrumentations. All of these components make this musical proposal a deep, versatile and delightful experience thanks to its musicality and color changes, and the stories it tells through these wonderful melodies and harmonies.
